Hi all,

On the first three below, this is just to confirm the City will not assert that their claims are extinguished by this settlement. If that is not the case, please say something immediately.

Renewing my request for ASAP review of the below individuals- there are only 4. I have removed Anna Pamalee and Naya Austen. If we do not hear by 5 pm, we would like to give them claim IDs so they can timely file. If the City later determines their arrests are not eligible, the claims can be denied.

We are waiting on your reply from inquiries submitted from Friday through the weekend, which you had said we would receive this morning. It is now 2:30 pm, and we still do not have replies for 7 of those people. I will paste the list below, again. We need to tell these individuals their claim IDs, and they have to be able to file. Will we be receiving your replies during business hours today? If they are not able to file their claims, this is certainly something we will raise with the judge. I am not trying to be difficult, but it is because of incomplete NYPD record keeping that these individuals did not receive notice 6 months ago, and it is not fair that they should be penalized for that when they are informing us of their eligibility with enough time to file claims.

Elena,

We should not and will not be considering any more inquiries. They are all late by a month. The court already extended the bar date to submit claims by 30 days until today. Today is the deadline to submit claim forms NOT to submit inquiries. We already discussed this and made this clear during our meeting last week.

Also discussed during our call last week was that any extension of the shutdown time agreed to (and here we agreed to 8am tomorrow morning) was for those who put in inquiries late Friday and over the weekend - NOT the ones who waited until the day the claims are due to inquire about them.

Hi Jenny and Genevieve,

Thank you for working to confirm eligibility today. Can we have a phone call to discuss the process for the rest of the day? We currently have 7 outstanding claim inquiries that class counsel believes are eligible and more will likely come in throughout the day. I am planning on working until midnight but I assume you will both need to end work sooner as will Rust. We need to discuss a reasonable way to get claim IDs to people who are eligible and inquire before the claim deadline, and enough time for them to then submit the claims. The current list of outstanding claims we believe are eligible is below. Please let me know when we can meet. Jonathan and I are open today.

Good afternoon, everyone.

I uploaded a new file of claims received 1/18 through 1/19/2024.

Also, I'd like to bring up a concern regarding the timing to take down the online claim module at 8:00am on 1/23. Since Friday, we've received over 30 new requests for a claimant number.

We'll upload a new file tomorrow (Monday) but I anticipate requests coming in through the evening of 1/22. Of course, we'll process these as quickly as possible but if we send you the final request file on Tuesday morning (1/23), parties need to review, respond to Rust, we'll need time to contact any new claimants and they need time to submit their claims.

Please let me know your thoughts on this or if you have any questions. Thank you.

Hi Milan,

To answer your questions:

- Inquiries after 1/22 should be sent a rejection
- Please close the claims portal at 8 am on January 23. If there are last minute inquiries, we will discuss how to proceed.

Good morning,

With the Claim deadline of 1/22/2024 approaching, I would like to get your input on the process for managing the online claim submission site and email inquiries that we expect to continue coming in.

1. On Tuesday morning, 1/23/2024, Rust will send any final email inquiries for parties review.
2. Please confirm if inquiries received AFTER 1/22 are to be forwarded for review or if Rust should respond with a rejection.
3. Our assumption is we will have a few valid claimants at the 11th hour that will require time to submit their Claims. As a result;
4. We can keep the online claim submission page active for as long as necessary or we can close it down as soon as parties agree.

Please let me know if you have any questions or if you would like to schedule a call to discuss. Thank you.
